WASHINGTON:

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 23.

The Most Reverend Archbishop Eccleston died at his residence at the Convent of Visitation in Georgetown, last evening, at twenty-five min- transaction of banking business generally. utes past six o'clock. Many days of severe sickness preceded his death, but he finally passed away, tranquilly as into a gentle slumber. The highest functionary in the Roman and gentle Christian, a man of great equanimity and uniformity of purpose, a scholar of rare accomplishments, a gentleman whose kindness and urbanity could not be exceeded, he was also an American patriot, whose estimate of his countrymen and of the political institutions of to know were sympathized in by all the citizens of our republic.

We have procured from the pages of the Catholic Expositor the following brief but truthful narrative of his life:

This eminent prelate was born on the 27th June, 1801, in Kent county, Maryland, a few miles from Chestertown. His grandfather was Sir John Eccleston, who emigrated to this country, from England, a few years prior to our struggle for independence. His father, Samuel Eccleston, was a wealthy farmer of Kent county, Maryland, and was distinguished for his highly cultivated mind and manners. Born of parents who, at that time, were members of the Protestant Episcopal church, he attended worship in that denomination until about the age of eleven years, when he was sent, as a student, to St. Mary's College, Baltimore. In this institution he continued as a day-scholar until his fifteenth year; and, during this early period, displayed shining talents, and a peculiar tact for learning By his sweetness of disposition, amiable deport ment, and graceful manners, he secured the friendship and attachment of his fellow students and professors, as well as all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. It was the intention of his mother to direct his studies towards the profession of the law. At sixteen years of age, he became a boarder in the College. He soon manifested an ardent love of virtue, and other dispositions which, in a few years, resulted in study of divinity; in which pursuit, by his assiduity and talent, he advanced so rapidly as to be considered qualified for the order of priesthood at an earlier age than that order is generally conferred.

Very soon after his ordination he crossed the Atlantic, and visited England, Ireland, and He was, however, suddenly recalled to America, (after a sojourn of about two years in Europe.) in consequence of the death of his stepfather, which happened about this time. From abroad he brought back with him a large store of useful knowledge, an ardent zeal in the cause of his religion, and an increased attachment to republican institutions. Upon his return to his native country, he was received with affection by his numerous friends; and, in a short time, received marks of their esteem and approbation, by his elevation first to the vicepresidency, and, subsequently, the presidency of the flourishing institution in which he had been educated. This office he filled with much honor to himself, and advantage to the college, for several years.

The late Archbishop Whitfield becoming infirm from disease, it was thought necessary, early in the year 1834, to appoint a coadjutor or assistant-bishop, in order to lessen the bur-den of his duties. The choice fell upon Mr. Eccleston, which was no ordinary mark fidence, when we consider that he had hardly attained his thirty-third year, and that there were so many others in the diocess, whose age, experience, and talents would have qualified them for the situation. Upon the death of the late archbishop, he succeeded de jure to the title and honors of the see, on the fourteenth of

As a preacher of the word of God, the archbishop had always been regarded as eloquent, graceful, and persuasive, displaying great zeal and pietý in all he uttered; and was sure to enlist the undivided attention of his hearers.

In person he was tall and commanding, and remarkable for his graceful deportment and ease in conversation. No one ever approached him familiarly without being pleased with him, or could look upon him without being impressed with the id that he was a true no Ever unostentatious and unassuming, his great aim was to do good to all men, seek-ing the will of his great Master. His study was commencement. The land is low, and the everto please Him, regardless of the world, which would willingly heap upon him its choicest honors did he not studiously fly from them.

Such was Archbishop Eccleston, the worthy successor of the Carrolls and the Neales; and a model, in suavity and elegance, as well as energy and ecclesiastical deportment, for the hierarchy at whose head he stood.

Georgetown, 1 o'clock, p. m .- The Convent Chapel and Bishop's House are hung with black, and every thing wears the appearance of woe and mourning. Solemn high mass o'clock, by the Reverend Mr. Brocard, and the "De Profundis" was sung in a most solemn manner by the Choir of Nuns.

The Archbishop is laid in state before the altar, dressed in full pontificals, and around him are the sweetest flowers. It is the most imposing sight ever seen within the Convent walls. The corpse looks as though it were in the gentlest slumber.

. The body will be conveyed to Baltimore at nine o'clock to-morrow. The procession will move from the Convent exactly at half-past seven, a m., in order to reach the depot in time for the nine o'clock train. Our Roman Catholic fellow-citizens are making arrangements to join in the procession, and many of them will escort the remains to Baltimore.

The corpse, on its arrival in Baltimore, will be conveyed to the Cathedral, where it will remain until Saturday morning, when a Grand all the clergy of their diocesses.

CITY IMPROVEMENTS.

Preparations are being made for permanently fitting up and connecting the chain of iron rail ing that was commenced last summer around the Departments of War, Navy, and State. The old wooden palings have been moved back from their former position some two feet, with a view to the protection of the grounds, until the new ones are substituted in their stead; and, in the course of a few days, other and more substantial railings will adorn these grounds. This, when completed, will be a great improvement to that portion of the city, and will add considerably to the beauties of the walks. We notice that pipes are being laid in Fourteenth street for the pur pose of conveying water along G street, which is to flow into a water-saving pump, similar to the one located on the corner of F and Fourteenth streets. This will be quite convenient and of great utility to the families in the neighborhood.

Go where you will, in what direction of th city you please, and you will note some prepara tion for improvement being made. Washington is increasing every day in wealth, beauty, and importance. The grounds around the Capitol and President's mansion never looked more beautiful; and Nature, with prolific hands, ha abundantly adorned them with beauteous flowers. A stroll through these walks about sun rise will amply verify this assertion. Is it not to be wondered at, that our citizens do not avail themselves of the privilege of enjoying the coo of the morning, and inhaling the pure and fragrant breezes of those beautiful promenades?

CAIRO .- We think it was Gen. Duff Green who originated the idea of a great commercial mart at this place, or perhaps who made the first attempt at building a town upon this site. Others are following him in the enterprise, and we doubt not we shall ere long witness the completion of the design.

It is believed that these means will effectually exclude the waters of both rivers. We hope so: for we cannot entertain a doubt that any possible amount of money expended in such improvements, if they prove efficient, will be productive of a rate of profit that few investments afford.

THE GREYS' BALL

The Ball given at Jackson Hall on Monday evening last by that fine corps, the Greys, and to which we have already alluded, was a brilliant affair. There never was a more complete galaxy of beauty and fashion assembled on any similar occasion in this city. All participated in the enjoyments of the evening with right hearty good-will. All was hilarity; and the ladies-ah, never did we witness or behold a more handsome, more intelligent, more fascinating assemblage of those tender buds of beauty. There were among them many that captivated and held in subjection the hearts of the sterner sex. Many were the hearts that were stricken and made to bleed by glances from their eyes. Miss M- was there; and oh what rapture! what bliss it were to gaze upon her as her sylphlike form glided through the mazy dance! We were much pleased to notice deputations from the Light Infantry Sharp-shooters, and also from the military of Alexandria. The Law Greys of Baltimore were also represented. This is as it should be. We like to see that friendly interchange of respect and good feeling existing between volunteer corps. Every thing moved along admirably well-nothing happening to mar the pleasures and enjoyments of the evening. The Ball was kept up until a late hour, and all seemed to be unconscious of the rapid flight of time until the clock "begun to strike its little ones," and then it was only perceptible that a small diminution had taken place in the throng. The company retired highly pleased with the entertainment and enjoyments of the evening, to dream over the incidents and pleasures through which they had passed. The Greys deserve great credit for the manner in which the Ball was gotten up and conducted throughout. RUGBY ACADEMY .- The pupils of this school gave an exhibition and soiree last evening, which was attended by vast numbers of the old and young, the beautiful and gay of our city. The young masters, in their exercises, gave evidence of the proficiency to which they had attained, under the instructions of their accomplished teacher, Mr. Morrison, and were listened to with much attention and loudly applauded. The music of a fine cotillon band and lancing followed.

While in one room a part of the company were listening to the rich tones of some fair damsels, in another the music of the band merrily sounded, "keeping time to bounding feet." How beautiful it was to see the gray and grave mingling in the mazes of the dance with little masters and misses in their teens, or below them-all happy as light hearts and smiling faces could make them. The party broke up at about half-past one, and the company went to their homes satisfied that they had spent an evening in the enjoyment of real, unalloyed pleasure.

TELEGRAPHING .- When the line of telegraph was first completed between this city and New Orleans, messages had to be relayed some five or six times in their transmission from one city to the other. But improvements have been made in this great wonder, as well as in other things. The line is now in such good order that despatches from New York to New Orleans are relayed but once from the former city-at Mobile, a distance of nearly two thousand miles. If this can be done now, why cannot we expect in a year or two to have the two hemispheres united by the lightning line?

THE HUGHES CASE .- The case of a soldier whose name we do not recollect, versus Colonel Hughes, for mal-treatment in Mexico, in having him confined, whipped, &c., was called up in the district court this morning, and a preliminary argument arose between counsel, the imwhich the great rivers of the West-the Mis- port of which we are at present unable to report.

> SENATOR DOUGLAS .- The Pennsylvanian of Monday has the following:

"This distinguished gentleman is now sojourn ing, with his family, at Glass's Washington house. He arrived on Saturday, and will remain until to-morrow. The national services of Judge Douglas, and his strong and striking commencement. The land is low, and the ever- abilities, have made him a historical character; varying and impetuous current of a great river | and we are rejoiced to see the disposition among is at either side of the narrow cape. We are men of all parties to do honor to one who doe so much honor to the country. We regret that his engagements at home compel him so speedily to leave our fine city."

We believe there are few men in this city, who know Judge Douglas, who will not yield s ready assent to the words of commendation here expressed. Plain, sensible, intelligent, and able, he fulfils with credit the duties of his high position; and, while he enjoys to the fullest extent the confidence of those with whom he is usually accustomed to act, he ever manifests a tolerant and liberal spirit that secures the respect and kindly feelings of his political opponents.

While speaking of Judge Douglas, we may mention a little item that will be read with pleasure by our citizens. It is, that he has purchased the homestead of Colonel Burche, a mile or so north of the capitol, and that he will improve and adorn it for the abiding-place of his family as long as his public duties shall require his presence in Washington. There are, we believe, some two or three acres of land surrounding this residence, and the access Taylor & Maury, our thanks should have been to it is being rendered very convenient and

> PREACHERS IN OFFICE.—The publication of the article of "Fair Play" would be only the beginning of a something we might wish in with our constitution as a people of the United vain to curb by-and-bye. We do not agree in States, and citizens of Massachusetts, living opinion with the writer; but that is not the reason why we withhold his communication; it is because we desire to avoid a protracted controversy. We will state, however, and thus indicate to the public the subject to which we allude, that we see no better reason for proscribing from public offices under our Government preachers of the gospel, who, from any reason satisfactory to themselves, may desire proscribing any other class of men. To do so were to treat them as either greater or less than men, which, in this 19th century, and this free republic, will not be done. God grant that such things may soon be known only in the records

MR. WEBSTER AT BOSTON.

Telegraphic despatches bring information of Mr. Webster's arrival at Boston yesterday, and of his being greeted by an immense concourse of people, who escorted him to the Revere House. In compliance with long-continued calls, he made a speech, of which the following sketch has been transmitted to the editor of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, to whom we are indebted for it: Boston, April 22-Noon.

Mr. Webster being called upon by a number of citizens to address them in front of the Revere House, replied to the call as follows:

 ne by surprise this morning, but it is a very agreeable surprise. I am as much pleased to see your cheerful and satisfied faces as I am to e again the face of that luminary which shines out from the heavens above : and if, gentlemen, you are half so glad to see me as I am to meet ou, there is at this moment a great quantity of happiness and good feeling in Bowdoin Pennsylvania ½@ 1 dis. Gentlemen: A long and violent convulsion of the elements has passed away, and the heaven and skies smile upon us. There is often an analogy between occurrences in the natural and political world, and sometimes political agitaions pass away, bringing after them sunshine, joy, and gladness. May it be so now!

I greet you as citizens of Boston—I welcome you—I offer you my heart and hand, with the deepest gratitude for what you and your fathers have done for me from the days of my early manhood, when I came from the North to throw myself among you to partake of your for-tunes, for good or evil, to the end of my life.

I am not vain enough to suppose, fellow-citizens, that I have done any essential service to my country in my day and generation; if I have so done, however little or however much it may be, I owe it mainly to the constant, warm, unwavering friendship and support of the people of Boston.

I am bound the way of all earth. I shall ere ong follow your fathers and my fathers to my last home; but while I live and breathe, and while I have the power of language or thought, while my heart beats or my tongue moves, I shall feel and I shall speak of Boston as the cherished object of my public, political, and, I may say, friendly regard.

Gentlemen, you do not expect to hear from me to-day any discourse. I come to see you and you come to see me. It is not an occasion for the discussion of any political topics. You do not expect me to detain you from your affairs while I rehearse any opinions of my own, or state the ground of those opinions. But let me congratulate you, and let me ask you to congratulate me, that the events of the last year two have placed us under better auspices. We see clearer; we breathe freer; we feel a new assurance that our political institutionsthe rich blessing and inheritance which we de-rived from our fathers—will endure—be perpetual-be immortal, if any institutions on earth can be immortal

Yes, fellow-citizens, the youngest of your children will grow up to manhood in the proud feeling that they are born to an inheritance of imperishable liberty, in the United States of America, and in their ancient and beloved-I say beloved, and to be always venerated under all circumstances—beloved and venerated Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

My fellow-citizens, we need not be too much self-satisfied; but after all, who is there among you, at this moment, that would change his po-litical and social condition for that which befalls the inhabitants or residents of any other country under the wide scope of the canopy which is
